MRS. STANTON'S FAREWELL.

Her Final Speech Today Before The Woman's Convention.

SHE OUTLINES HER PLATFORM.

Proceedings of the Opening Day of the Convention-Mrs. Stanton Says That in Less Than Ten Years Women Will Vote Everywhere-Other Speeches.

Today is eminently woman's day at the national capital. The National American woman suffrage association is in session here. For the last week the delegates have been arriving in this city from the four quarters of the country and today they began their annual meeting. prepared to speak, resolve and demand. Linmusic hall was the place for holding the meetings and there was something very appropriate in this, for it was in the old Lincoln hall at the different associations held their annual meetings during many years.

The two associations, the American and the tional, united into one, held their first meetg as a united body in the new hall this morning, beginning a new era, perhaps, in a new building. There was a large audience in attendance, filling the floor and first callery quite full. It was made up principally of women, but there was a goodly scattering of of women, but there was a goodly scattering of the male sex as well, and they were not the least interested of the participants at the meeting either.

There were women from all parts of the country and in all professions of life. There were doctors, lawyers, ministers and newspaper here of activity is not so broad perhaps, lying as it does in the home circles a nation. It was an earnest, enthusiastic gathering who thoroughly understand the sub-ject which they we here to discuss. To every word uttered from the stage they turned a re-dy ear. Upon the stage was gathered an assemblage of the leading spirits in the movement. The boxes, filled, and everywhere throughout the auditorium were women whose names and faces are familiar the country over for the part they have played on the stage of life's action.

WRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON. There was a table in the front of the stage and by it was seated Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanon, the president of the united societies. Her handsome, kindly face, framed by its wealth of snow-white hair, beamed sweetly upon snow-white hair, beamed sweetly upon snid, her friends, for, as she said, she considered every one present her personal friend. It was her last appearance before such an audience, probably for years, for expects to make her home in the fu-ture with her daughter in London. The fact that they might never again listen to her eloquent voice and gain strength and en-thusiasm from her zeal gave an added interest to every one of her many listeners, and not one word of her opening speech was lost. It was Stanton day in the convention, for

Mrs. Stanton occupied a seat on a sofa that was drawn up near a table in front. Her comfortable figure was robed richly in black and she had a shawl of white silk and lace drawn about her shoulders. By her side sat Susan B. Anthony.

Miss Anthony was attired in a plain black silk and hugged a striped shawl about her, for it was quite cold in the hall. Phoebe Couzins, bearing a crutch, sat near. Then there were on the platform Julia Ward Howe. Virginia L. Minor, Clara B. Colby, May Wright Sewall, Laura Ormisten Chant and others whose names suffrage movement.

In the boxes and in the orchestra sat other distinguished leaders of the suffrage hosts. It was after 11 o'clock when Mrs. Stanton came forward and called the meeting to order. MRS. STANTON RETURNS THANKS.

When Mrs. Stanton rose and stood beside the table at the front of the stage there was a burst of applause and handkerchiefs were waved.

"I would like to return thanks to my friends." she said, "for again making me president of the association. I can assure you that in going to England as president of the National American woman suffrage association I feel it a greater honor than if I had been sent as a minister plenipotentiary to any court in Europe."

Mrs. Stanton said she proposed to make an address on resolutions which she had prepared herself and which she would ask Mrs. Colby to read. Mrs. Stanton said these resolutions were entirely her own; she was responsible for them and not the association. "The reason I do this," she remarked, "is that this is the only session I will be here, and I will be unable to be present in the committee of resolutions and use them there.

quickly to the front. "We have with us," Miss Anthony said, "one of the ancient family, John Anthony said, "one of the ancient family, John W. Hutchinson, who wants to sing before the resolutions are read." Miss Anthony waited a moment until the applause died out and then told about the campaign in Kansas in 1867. "Wherever the women failed," she said, "John Hutchinson and his brothers and sisters succeeded. They sang into the hearts of the people what could not be beaten into their brains by argument."

Mr. Hutchinson, whose long gray hair and Mr. Hutchinson, whose long gray hair and beard give him a patriarchal appearance, then stepped to the front and sang without accompaniment a song beginning with the words
I may not be a prophet;
But methinks I see the time

MRS. STANTON'S RESOLUTIONS. Mrs. Colby then read Mrs. Stanton's resoluwidespread organization of our forces must be secured, that by concentrated action we may make our united powers irresistible at any given time and place.

Still Mrs. Stanton did not begin her spe for Miss Anthony interrupted her again until two men brought in a large shield bearing the armorial design of Wyoming and decorated with fan flags. This was placed at the front of the platform and its appearance was the sig-nal for applause.

Mrs. Stanton then delivered her speech. She did not stand, but sat at the little table during the hour it took her to read her address. She adjusted her glasses to her nose and sat so that the light from a reading lamp on the table fell upon her manuscript.

In introducing her speech Mrs. Stanton referred to her intended departure for Europe.
She said she might not again appear on this platform for some years, perhaps never. In saying farewell for the present she asked the privilege of expressing her own views on a few ques-tions. She said now that younger leaders were coming forward it was fitting to give them the key to archives; to tell them something of their key to archives; to tell them something of their genealogical tree. Mrs. Stanton then reviewed the struggle for woman suffrage. She went over the names of the series of brilliant and great men and women who had spoken and labored for woman's cause. They seemingly failed, she said, to produce any lasting impression. Their words fell on those who had ears to hear but heard not, eyes to see but they saw not. The people remembered the speakers but not the people remembered the speakers but not the lessons they taught.

Mrs. Stanton attributed the failure to make more rapid progress to two causes: First. The apathy and indifference to society to all reforms. Second. Lack of thorough and widespread organization.

MRS. STANTON'S GREAT HOPES. She sketched the organization of the national and the American associations and their work as separate organizations for twenty years. Now they had come to the conclusion in union there is strength and there was now but one organization. In uniting all forces under one banner, victory, she declared, would soon be theirs and there would no longer be need of any organization.

"I do fully believe," declared Mrs. Stanton earnestly, "that in less than ten years the women in this country will be voting in every

With all their forces united, she said, their influence in the near future would be well night irresistable. The time had come for more aggressive measures, more self assertion on the part of women than ever before. All the intelligent women of America today, she said, are governed by foreigners. Their title to are governed by foreigners. Their title voice in this government is as clear as that of the man by their side. They were only claiming to exercise a right as old as the Constitution.

"WOMANLY."

Some men, she said, told them that they must be patient, persuasive and womanly. What was a man's idea of "womanly?" It was that a woman should be submissive. He wanted no self-assertion on her part; no crying out against him as a tyrant. While no crying out against him as a tyrant. While the darkest pages in history are those that tell of the outrages on women, should men tell them to be patient, to be womanly. What do they know of what it is to be womanly. To men it is to be the mere echoes of themselves. She dared say the carpet knights of England thought Jean d'Arc unwomanly. She dared say that the Russian officers thought Florence Nightingale unwomanly. unwomanly.
"I consider that the best womanly way," said Mrs. Stanton, "which accomplishes the ob-Referring to the plaint that they came for-

She said they should demand equal rights for women in the church. It seemed fair that ters of government in the church. If women had had a voice in church government in the revision of creeds eminent divines would not today be debating the question of the damnation of infants. Then insane asylums were filled with women whose reason had been dethroned by these religious superstitions.

Referring to various Sunday law movements and movements to secure, as it was claimed, the recognition of God in the Constitution. urged by some women, Mrs. Stanton said that this action on the part of women had called into question what women's influence might be in government.

"I do hope," said Mrs. Stanton, "that this association will declare that the woman suffrage association is opposed to all union of church and state." Mrs. Stanton expressed the hope that there would be no more legislation on the question of marriage and divorce until woman had a voice in framing such laws.

Some might say none of these questions had any place on the woman suffrage platform. They must manifest a broad catholic spirit for all shades of opinion. The cause of women wherever they were wronged had been heard the race question. How comes it that after all the privileges of citizenship had been conferred upon the freed- | sir." man the race question again came up for discussion. It was because every fundamental principle through which the negro was en-franchised was immediately denied in the case of women. Under the full belief that women had the right to vote under the fourteenth amendment many of them had persisted in pressing their claims. The Court and had been remanded to the states, it being declared that the United States had no voters; that they were the voters of the states. These decisions were now reacting and were used against the negro. The south had kept a watchful eye on them. All over the south today they were draving the negro from the polls and denying the authority of the United States, just as in the north they had driven were from the solls. Mrs. Stanton was about to sit down and give place to Mrs. Colby, when Miss Anthony came was to be adopted and all discontented citizens are to be sent to some Siberia, woman's turn would come next.

They had better make a stand, she said, now for the freedman and demand justice for him as well as for themselves. All that the freedmen and women ask today is justice. MRS. STANTON'S DAUGHTER.

When Mrs. Stanton finished speaking she introduced her daughter, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch of England, who made a short address on the condition of women in England as seen through an American woman's as seen through an American woman's eyes. She spoke of the two societies in that country looking toward woman suffrage. She said it was a trying and bitter thing to her that these were not broad enough, but rejoiced that a new one had recently been formed urging suffrage for women on the same basis and for the same reasons as for men. Mrs. Blatch said that the sons as for men. Mrs. Blatch said that the thing that struck her most forcibly on her return tions. They declared that "a thorough and to this country was the fact that women were becoming lamentably conservative. In matters of labor and social troubles England is a prick house on lot 12½ by 50 feet, 1906 New quarter of a century ahead of America. This is, she considered, a result of the grinding poverty of the people there. "Who would dare to rise in the Senate and say as a member of parliament recently said: 'We are all socialists. One thing more let me say. Do not worship legislation. Education is the thing. By that means may we accomplish the end we in this country for the freedmen. "Woman, too, has dreamed—dreamed of the time when, equal with her brother in the least jet and tittle of every civil, social and political right, she shall have the power to exercise jointly with him that right of sovereignty, that right of suffrage, upon which the security for every other right depends. Already half the prayer is granted. One by one the barriers of legal incapacity have been thrown down and the gate to many an avenue to honer and wealth and profit which had hitherto been closed against her now yields to the pressure of a woman's hand. Here, too, the great work goes on steadily to its consumation. The little reverses which come from time to time, such as the dewhich come from time to time, such as the de which come from time to time, such as the de-nial off suffrage in the state of Washington, are only the exceptions which serve to show more clearly the general drift of the tide. Shall we believe that these are permanent obstacles? We might as well say that the Mississippi will not reach the sea because there are eddies in the current. The progress of humanity is cer-tain. It will not stop until man and woman are equal in every right before the law; and government everywhere derives its just powers from the consent of the governed."

A CHEER AND A KISS. At the conclusion of Mr. Foulke's address Mrs. Stanton rose to leave the hall, and as she did so, at Phobe Couzin's suggestion, all the audience arose and gave Mrs. Stanton the "Chatauqua farewell," with three cheers and much waving of handkerchiefs. Miss Couzins gave her a kiss for the whole assemblage and in the name of the association wished her God-speed on her journey and a safe re-turn in the near future.

The morning session then adjourned with a few words from Miss Susan B. Anthony.

The National American Association. The American woman suffrage association and the National woman suffrage association will no longer exist as separate organizations. At the lengthy executive sessions held yesterday they both adopted one common constitu-tion and will hereafter be known as one or-ganization, the National American association. Delegates to the number of nearly 200 came together last night in the parlors of the Riggs house. Hereafter the various state associations will be auxilliary to the general associa-tion, in which they will each have representa-

Mrs. May Wright Sewall presided at the meeting last night, at which the following offi-cers were elected: President, Elizabeth Cady Stanton; vice president at large, Susan B. Anthony; recording secretary, Rachel Foster Avery; corresponding secretary, Alice Stone Blackwell; treasurer, Jane H. Spofford; chair-man of executive committee, Lucy Stone.

THEIR BIDS REJECTED. Proposals for Building Two Gunboats and a Practice Ship Declined.

A letter was today sent to the Samuel L. Moore & Sons ship building company of Elizabethport, N. J., from the Secretary of the Navy, rejecting their bids on the proposed two one - thousand - ton gunboats and the eight - hundred - ton practice vessel. They were far below any other bidders, their figures being as follows: For one gunboat $285,000, or $562,875 for both; for the practice vessel, $245,325. The other bids were: Bath iron works, one gunboat, $327,000; both, $637,-000; Atlantic iron works, one gunboat, $344,000. WHY THE BIDS WERE REJECTED. The letter recites the provision of the acts of Congress authorizing the construction of the vessels, to the effect that every bidder shall show to the satisfaction of the Sec-retury of the Navy that within three months from the date of the contract he will be possessed of the necessary plant for the per-formance of the work in the United States. The department having been informed that the firm is not now possessed of such a plant, and there having been a failure on the part of the firm to show that they would be so possessed within the specified time it was decided that they were not competent bidders under the advertisement. Inclosed in the letter was the certified check or $30,000 deposited with the bid as a guarantee of performance in case of acceptance.

WHAT WILL BE DONE NOW? It will now be for the Secretary to determine whether he will accept one of the remaining bids or readvertise the vessels. The appropriation for the two gunboats is $700,000, and for the practice vessel $260,000. The latter ship must, under any circumstances, be readvertised unless the depart-ment concludes to build her itself, for the Moores were the only people willing to build her. It is probable that the bid of the Bath iron works will be accepted.

AN OLD TRICK PLAYED. How Mr. Jacob Keobel Was Robbed by a Nice Young Man. There was some excitement in the Bank of Washington this morning, shortly before noon. Mr. Jacob Keobel, an elderly gentleman who conducts a grocery store at No. 1219 5th street northwest, was in the bank. He had drawn some money and was counting it, when being too anxious lest one may hurt the cause. Every truth they see was theirs to give, not to keep. Another question confronting them was called his attention to two one-dollar notes lying on the floor at his feet. The young man tapped Mr. Keobel on the shoulder and said: "You have dropped some of your money.

> Mr. Keobel stooped to pick up the two notes and as he did so the stranger quietly lifted a portion of the pile of notes on the counter and as quietly walked out with his plunder. as quietly walked out with his plunder.
> Mr. Keobel picked up the money that had been dropped as a bait and again started to count his cash. Bill after bill was turned over and counted, but he could not make but $52. The thief had been generous and only taken half the pile. Mr. Keobel notified the bank officials. The detectives at police headquarters were telephoned for, but it was too late. The thief was off. A good description too late. The thief was off. A good descrip-tion of the man was obtained and the police have been notified to look out for him.

Important Real Estate Sales. Two important sales of unimproved property have been recently made in the vicinity of Dupont circle. B. H. Warner & Co. have sold two lots in the triangular piece of ground north of Dupont circle, fronting on Connecticut avenue and 19th street. The lots have a frontage of 32 feet and an average depth of 75 feet, and adjoin the drug store. The purchaser was Mr. Jas. F. Dartt and the price paid was $5 per square foot. At the northeast corner of Massachusetts avenue and 20th street, adjoining Castle Stew-art, is a vacant lot having a frontage of about 50 feet and a depth of 100 feet. This fine building lot was owned by the Lawrence estate of Boston, and has been sold through Addison & Larcombe, real estate brokers, to Mrs. Hunt of New York. The price paid was $5.50 per square foot. It is the intention of the purchaser to erect a fine residence there.

Duncanson Bros., auctioneers, have sold at public sale a lot in Burleith, an addition to Georgetown, 50 by 125 feet, to N. L. Burchell Hampshire avenue, to N. W. Fitzgerald for $3,075; also the adjoining house, 1908, for $2,980 to M. F. Coughlin; also a two-story ton for $3,800; lot 2 in square 38, 28 feet 7 inches by about 100 feet deep, on Washington circle near 23d street, containing 3,142 square feet, for $1.75 per square foot, to John F.
